The new Washington County history book, the first written in more than 30 years, brings county history up-to-date. The book gives about equal attention to pioneer and more contemporary life, and explains the county’s unique role as the gateway to Minnesota history. This book is arranged by generations, starting with the pre-settlement period and continuing on through the suburbanization of the present day. The book also includes the local histories of 33 Washington County communities.
